About Bali:

Bali is one among thousands of islands that make up the republic of Indonesia. Bali lies along trade routes connecting the Spice Islands (Maluku or Moluccas islands), China, and India. These ancient routes not only brought goods; they also spread ideas. Two thousand years ago, many Southeast Asians began adopting and adapting aspects of Indian-related civilization, especially literary language, religion, and court culture.

The island's culture is influenced by Hinduism, Buddhism, and Animism. The island's culture is also influenced by trade routes with China and India. The island is mostly mountainous, with the highest point being Mount Agung, also known as Bali Peak. Bali has a dry season from May to November. The island has a diverse landscape, including beaches, rice terraces, and volcanic hillsides.

Bali is Indonesia's main tourist destination. The island has a variety of natural, cultural, and historical attractions. Bali offers world-class diving and surfing. Bali's main gateway is Ngurah Rai International Airport (DPS). Many international airlines offer direct and connecting flights to Denpasar.

We shall be sharing the Program Agenda for the Conference shortly which will be published on our website (www.fimmda.org).
